

المملكة المتحدة THE UNITED KINGDOM

THE COUNTRY – A FEW INTERESTING FACTS

- The UK is home to thousands of international higher education students.
- Every year, more than 500,000 international students from more than 200 countries and territories study in the UK, making the UK one of the most popular study destinations in the world.
- The UK is also home to some of the world's oldest universities.
- Oxford is said to be the oldest university in the English-speaking world with teaching to have begun in 1096 and Cambridge, the fourth oldest university in the world, began its education journey in 1209.

- According to estimations, in London alone you can hear conversations in around 300 different languages as you deftly navigate your way through the crowded underground or public transport system (if you end up studying in London, that is). You will also hear Welsh in Wales, Gaelic and Scots in Scotland, Irish and Ulster Scots in Northern Ireland and Cornish in Cornwall, England.
- The UK is a multicultural society and most universities have prayer rooms that anyone can use, as do most public places, such as hotels, hospitals and airports and many shops and supermarkets sell halal food.

THE REPUBLIC OF IRELAND

THE COUNTRY – A FEW INTERESTING FACTS

- Ireland is an island located on the West of Europe. It has produced ten Nobel Prize winners, including one for Physics, four for English Literature and five for Peace.
- Ireland is predominantly Roman Catholic, but Irish people are known to be down-to-earth and friendly. It is a multicultural society where all religions are embraced and respected.

هولندا THE NETHERLANDS

THE COUNTRY – A FEW INTERESTING FACTS

- There is more to THE NETHERLANDS than just nice flowers, cheese and the Port of Rotterdam. This small North-European country is located nearby the United Kingdom and home to many international students as many higher education institutions offer courses taught in English.
- The Netherlands has a two-tier or binary higher education system to accommodate different types of learners who want to pursue an undergraduate (Bachelor's) degree.
- The Dutch higher education system consists of two types of higher education institutions that award Bachelor's degrees: Research-intensive universities/universities of technology and Universities of Applied Sciences. Universities of Applied Sciences focus on the practical application of knowledge or even problem-based learning in order to prepare you for certain professions, while research-intensive universities focus relatively more on the independent practice of research and analysis of complex issues in an academic setting. The differences between the types of HEIs is narrowing though as e.g. research universities tend to focus on problem-based learning approaches: This means that students will actively address real issues to be able to better grasp and implement (academic) theory.

- Dutch' and not 'Deutsch' (German) is spoken in the Netherlands. But most Dutch people are well conversant in English as well. The Netherlands is a multicultural society with large Moroccan and Turkish communities, so there are plenty of specialised shops selling only halal food and it is easy to find a place to pray.

THE NETHERLANDS

THE COUNTRY – A FEW INTERESTING FACTS

- There is more to THE NETHERLANDS than just nice flowers, cheese and the Port of Rotterdam. This small North-European country is located nearby the United Kingdom and home to many international students as many higher education institutions offer courses taught in English.
- The Netherlands has a two-tier or binary higher education system to accommodate different types of learners who want to pursue an undergraduate (Bachelor's) degree.
- The Dutch higher education system consists of two types of higher education institutions that award Bachelor's degrees: Research-intensive universities/universities of technology and Universities of Applied Sciences. Universities of Applied Sciences focus on the practical application of knowledge or even problem-based learning in order to prepare you for certain professions, while research-intensive universities focus relatively more on the independent practice of research and analysis of complex issues in an academic setting. The differences between the types of HEIs is narrowing though as e.g. research universities tend to focus on problem-based learning approaches: This means that students will actively address real issues to be able to better grasp and implement (academic) theory.
- Dutch' and not 'Deutsch' (German) is spoken in the Netherlands. But most Dutch people are well conversant in English as well. The Netherlands is a multicultural society with large Moroccan and Turkish communities, so there are plenty of specialised shops selling only halal food and it is easy to find a place to pray.
